

BAA BAA BLACK SHEEP

Singing to a baby is a wonderful way to bond and soothe them. The gentle rhythm and melody can calm a fussy baby, help them feel secure, and even promote early language development. Whether it's a lullaby, a simple tune, or a favorite song, your voice is comforting and familiar to your baby. This shared experience can also foster emotional closeness and create cherished memories.

Don't forget the eye contact and try to be in sync with your baby - pause when they look away, as this is a common sign they need a break, continue once they look in your direction.

MULTISENSORY STIMULATION

SING WITH MOOSHIE

Make sure you have eye contact and emphasize lip movement as you sing "baa baa", very young baby might mimic opening lips on "AAA" sound, while older ones (approx. 4-6 months old) might watch you singing and try babbling "BA" by themselves. Don't expect this to happen immediately, but be persistent and eventually your smart little bub will be a babbling bub.
